B. R. NEWTON IN LIMELIGHT TO SUCCEED D. F. MALONE

By BILL PRICE.

Byron R. Newton, Assistant Secretary of the Treasury, will be seriously considered by President Wilson and Secretary McAdoo for collector of the port of New York to fill the vacancy caused by the resignation of Dudley Field Malone, long time close personal friend of President Wilson, who is going to devote his time to aiding the cause of the

there is constantly going on a current of speculation in and out of Congress. La Foliette is strong in certain Northwestern States; Weeks gress as to the Democratic and Republican Presidential nominations in 1920.

The wiseacres of politics unfailing-ly comment upon what they deem to be the "plays" of men in public life around the Presidential lightning faround the Presidential lightning forms of 1920, and hints that all this is mighty remote do not discourage them in the least.

Emplits of Association of Congress. La Foliette is strong in certain Northwestern States; Weeks has New England at his back; Senator Watson can easily have Indiana; Congressman "Jim" Mann can depend upon Illinois; Senator Wadsworth is sure of New York.

President Wilson will absolutely disregard all talk about the interest he may take in the nomination three years from now. No critic of his attempts to intimate that he will seek to control anybody or anything. The Bignificant Appointment. The collectorship of New York has from the politicians the collectorship paironage connected with the office no longer exists, however, and the importance attached to the position now is largely in the recognition the appointment carries for one or another faction in New York, the relationable the appointee bears to men high in State, city or national politics, and the polities he may adopt to strengthen his party with business and financial elements he comes in close contact with President Wilson uniformly looks to his Cabinet officers to recommend to him suitable men for filling vacan-cies. The collectorable comes under Secretary McAdoe, himself a New fork man, and familiar with the liftical trend in that State. In the case of Dudley Field Malone the choice was a personal one with the President, and Wilson may again igore the desires of the ambitious politicians and name a man allied more closely with business than with polipaper man when he became private secretary to Mr. McAdoo in 1912. In his more than four years in the Treasury he has not paid much attention to politics, and has run his office along the lines of solicitude for the interests of Uncle Sam. He has had clash after clash with rural Congress-
